

Dr. Margaret Barton-Burke - Bio

Dr. Margaret Barton-Burke PhD, RN, FAAN is a leader in a variety of academic, hospital and professional organization settings. She earned a BS in nursing from William Paterson College and an MSN from Boston University. Margaret obtained a Ph.D. from the University of Rhode Island and has held clinical scientist positions in addition to faculty appointments at several prestigious national and international academic institutions.

Margaret maintains status as Professor Emeritus at the University of Missouri-St. Louis. She is also an adjunct faculty member at the Queensland University of Technology in Queensland, Australia, The Graduate School and University Center Ph.D. Program in Nursing Science, and Columbia University School of Nursing. She is also an Invitational Faculty & Senior Faculty Member in the African Doctoral Dissertation Research Fellowships Training Workshops sponsored by the African Population and Health Research Center in Nairobi, Kenya.

Margaret is a retired Colonel who served in the US Army Nurse Corp of the Massachusetts Army National Guard. She previously served as president of the Oncology Nursing Society (ONS) and is a Fellow in the American Academy of Nursing and the New York Academy of Medicine.

Currently, Margaret is the Director of Nursing Research at Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center in New York City. She is focused on enhancing the education, research, and clinical expertise of staff nurses through the revision of the Nursing Research Fellowship, and the Research Forum. She further aims to improve grantsmanship facilitation and funding opportunities to support nursing research.