

Pamela R. Sutherland - Bio

Pamela R. Sutherland was born and raised in Jersey City, NJ. Pamela studied nursing at Seton Hall University and graduated with a Bachelor of Science in Nursing. After she earned her BSN, she moved to New York where she had a calling to help the underprivileged and underserved in Newburgh. In addition, she has dedicated the last twenty-two years commuting from New York to New Jersey to care for the adult oncology, stem-cell transplant patients at Hackensack University Medical Center (HUMC).

While working at HUMC, Pamela committed herself to becoming the best nurse she could be to her patients and the community through a lifelong journey of education. She decided to obtain two more degrees at Seton Hall University, a Master of Science in Nursing Administration and a Master of Science in Nursing Adult Primary Care. Pamela has continued her journey to achieve her Nurse Practitioner degree so she could provide primary care to the oncology stem cell transplant patients.

Pamela is known as an exemplary nurse practitioner and outstanding patient advocate in the mission outreach programs.
