

Pamela R. Sutherland - Story

Pamela R. Sutherland was born and raised Jersey City, NJ. She learned at an early age that she was blessed beyond measure and wanted to be able to help others who were less fortunate. Pamela has always wanted to serve the underprivileged and those in need of heartfelt love and true compassion. She studied nursing at Seton Hall University, and while there, she spent countless hours working with the poor in Newark. After graduate school, Pamela moved to New York and did similar work in the inner city of Newburgh.

As a nurse practitioner, she has volunteered many weekend days with CHMC, a Christian healthcare organization. The organization provided primary care medicine to the indigent migrant workers from Ecuador and Mexico who worked tirelessly away from their families on a duck farm in Liberty, NY. Soon after, Pamela ventured to an international organization, Hands of Hope, and went to Manaus, Brazil for medical missions. This has changed her life and her heart radically. It is her desire to commit her life to these causes for many years to come. Pamela loves her work as a nurse practitioner at her current position, but she has much more to give!
