

Samantha Hodge - Bio

Samantha has been a registered nurse for five years. She earned her Bachelor of Nursing with a minor in Hispanic Studies from Boston College in 2015. She worked for three and a half years in the emergency department at Boston Children's Hospital, prior to pursuing her passion for global health. This passion developed after she took clinical classes and worked as a nursing student abroad in South America and Nicaragua.

Her passion for helping others continued to be ignited as she became a travel nurse in El Salvador and Rwanda. Samantha volunteered with the Catholic Medical Mission Board for seven months as a pediatric nurse at Mutomo Mission Hospital in Mutomo, Kenya. She fulfilled a three-fold nurse: inpatient nurse to adult and pediatric population, nursing mentor and educator, and community health nurse.

She currently supports the emergency department at Children's National Medical Center in Washington, D.C.
